2. Citations and explanations (Rule 70.7)

1. Technical field

The invention relates to a method for synchronising a wireless communication system divided up into wireless cells.

2. Problem_addressed

The object is to design a cellular wireless communication system that offers subscribers optimum wireless coverage with both high and low volumes of traffic while ensuring minimum co-channel interference.

3. Solution

If the number of mobile stations exceeds a specified threshold value, a second synchronisation method is used whereby the mobile stations receive signals from base stations in their own wireless cell as well as from neighbouring base stations. The base station signals are used to determine a time synchronisation value and a frequency synchronisation value to which the mobile station then synchronises itself.

Advantage

There is no need to transmit high-precision reference signals to the mobile station because each mobile station is synchronised to a received average value for all the received base stations. This releases additional wireless transmission resources that can be used to handle user data transmissions.

4. Prior art

WO-A-00/35117 (document D2) is considered to be the closest prior art, and forms the basis of the preamble of claim 1. The aforementioned solution is not obvious even from a combination of the teachings of documents D2 and D1 (US-A-5 872 774).

5. PCT Article 41(2)

Claim 1 is based on claims 1 and 2 in the original application.
